

Does this event relate to my access of privilege for the various social identities? [race, religion, class, age, gender, sexuality, etc.]

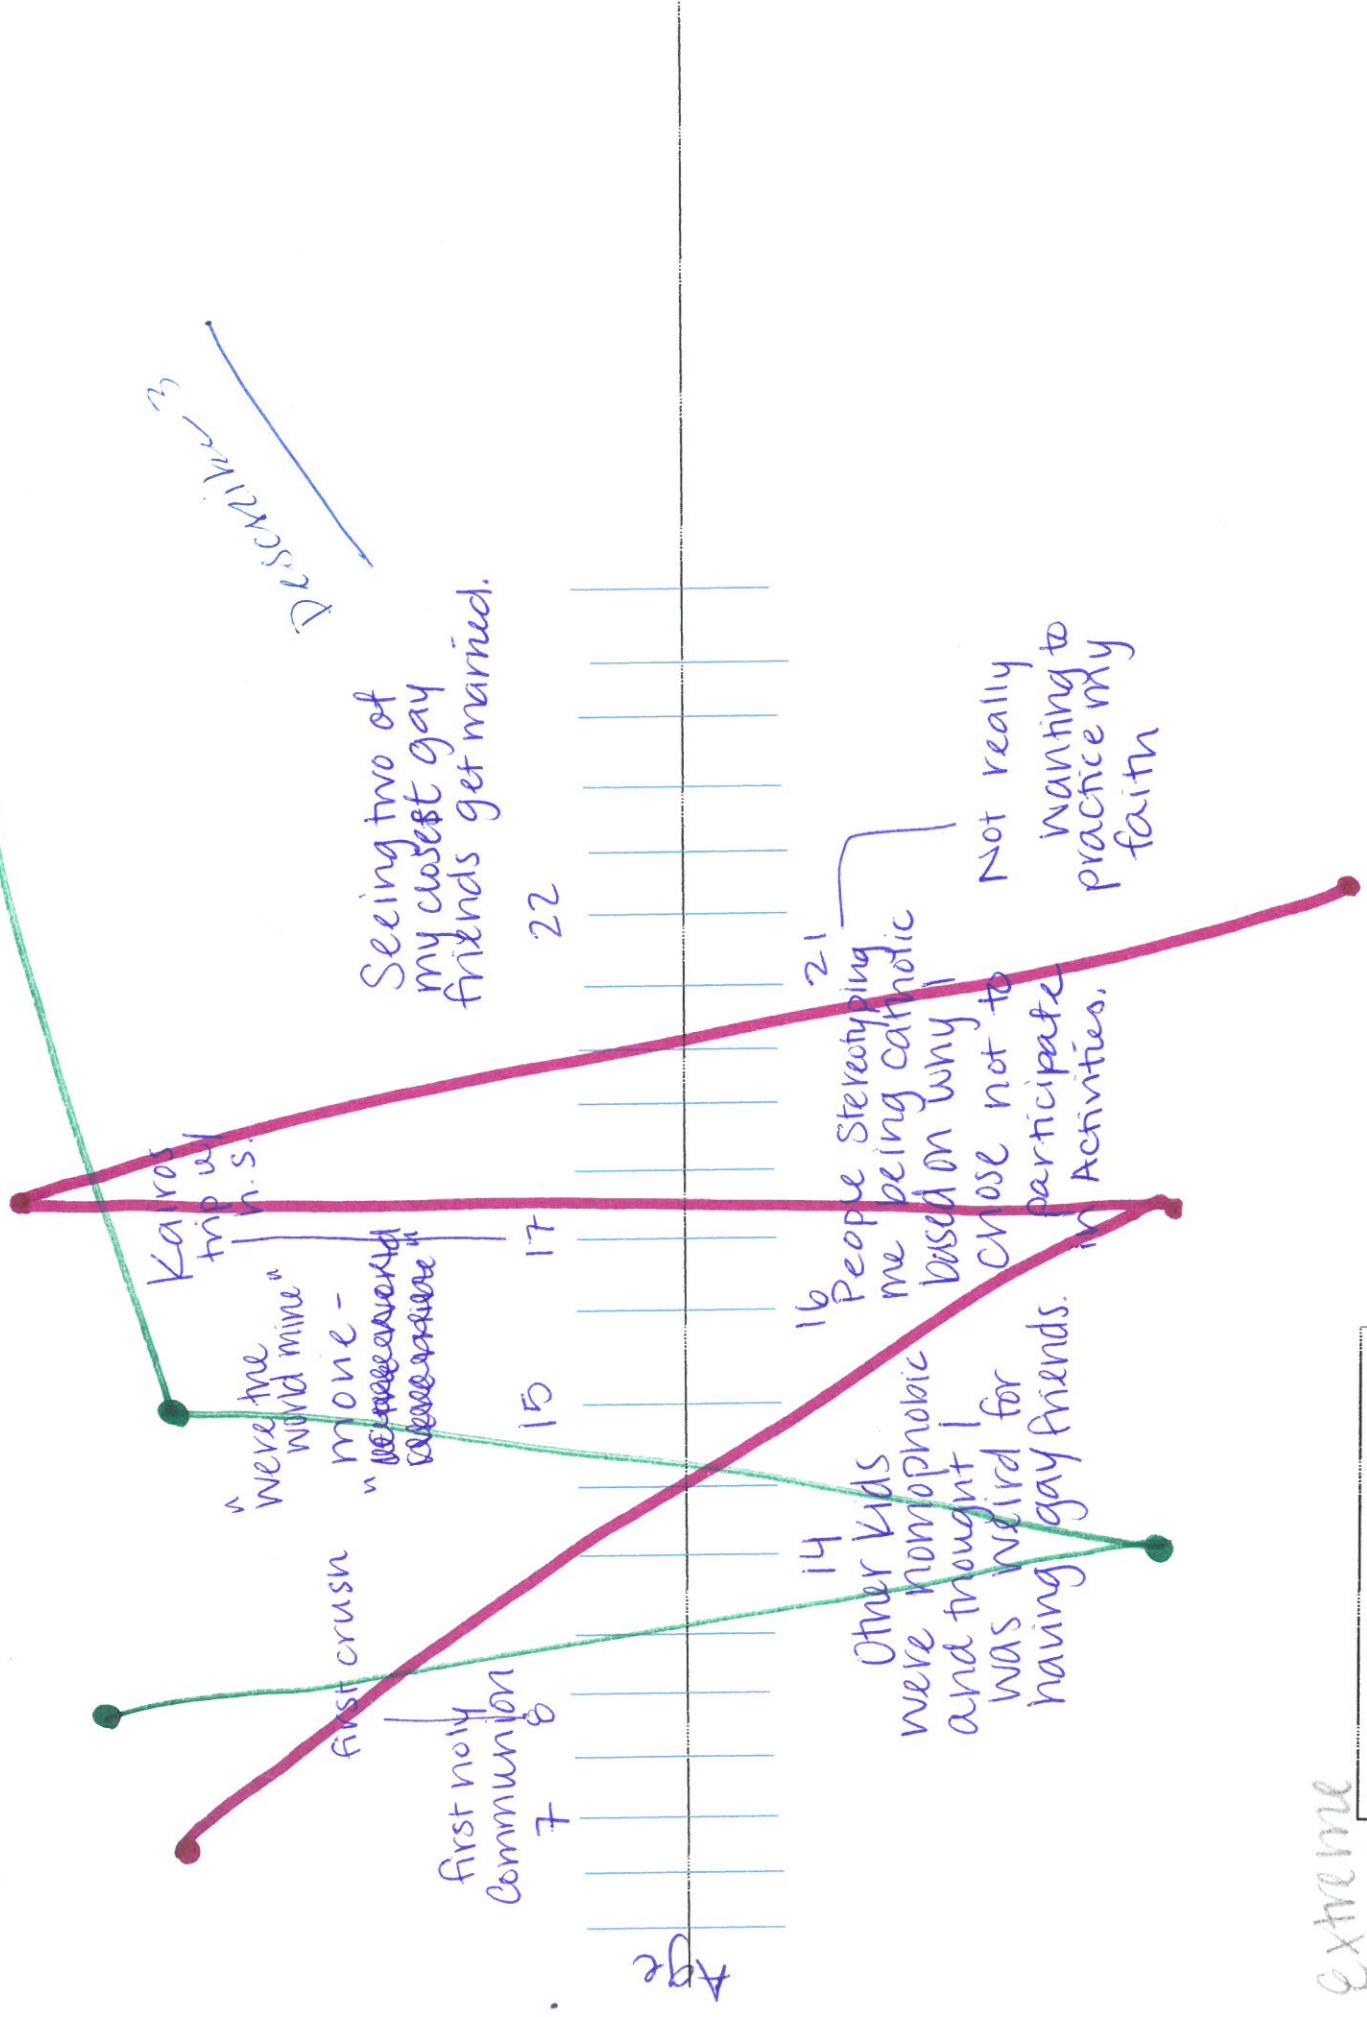

I definitely think my access to opportunities was limited due to my family's lack of education and social connections.
I have taken advantage of these opportunities to the best of my ability but I am lucky to be in a position that I am not necessarily in a position to be in.
The powerlessness of my family is a product of society's suppression of their rights and the way they are treated by some people as if I am fortune to them and someone else is deserving. I am lucky to be in a situation where I can take advantage of opportunities and make the most of my family's lack of education.
While some people see me as fortunate because of my family's lack of education, I am lucky to be in a situation where I can take advantage of opportunities and make the most of
my family's lack of education.
The powerlessness of my family
is a product of society's suppression
of their rights and the way they are
treated by some people as if I am fortune
to them and someone else is
deserving. I am lucky to be in a situation where I can take advantage
of opportunities and make the most of
my family's lack of education.

Sexuality / Religion

(straight) → (Catholic)

Positive experiences

Extreme

Negative experiences

I chose sexuality and religion because these are a big part of my identity. Being surrounded by very dear friends and family of varying sexuality, I have been negatively effected based on how people see these different groups. I've chosen these moments because they have helped defined my character as well as my thriving to other groups. Along with sexuality, my religion is another crucial aspect of my identity because, ~~them like~~ my sexuality, has been engrained since day one. I've had trying times with religion and sexuality, but these are aspects that help define my life map.